However... last year I received an advance copy of her second book, The Tent, The Bucket and Me - an extremely funny book following Emma's family camping holidays in the 1970s. It's rare that I laugh out loud whilst reading but the first family holiday had me in stitches.

The tent was canvas so it bellied out in a storm and got heavy in rain, Emma herself- a child attracted to anything toilet related (there's a cautionary tale about negotiating a French public toilet in the dark) and the pink plastic bucket that despite its cheerful colouring had a foul and smelly revenge on those who used it.
